Tzohar Event

The ARK Centre

has pleasure inviting you to an evening to hear Adam Segal

Director of International Strategy and Development for Tzohar

Israel - Can there be Harmony in Discord? Navigating Disunity and Bridging the Religious-Secular Divide Before, During and Beyond 7th October

The unprecedented disunity, bordering on civil war, that was Israel's reality on 6 October was replaced by unprecedented unity on 7 October. Three months later, sadly, the cracks are already beginning to reappear. Tzohar is at the forefront of uniting the Jewish people across Israel. Adam will bring you the latest from Israel with his personal insights and the impact of the war on this important issue. He will explain how Tzohar, a household name across Israel, provides programs to connect Secular Israelis to their heritage and Jewish practise - from enabling Jewish marriages and Bnei Mitzvah opportunities to providing services from Kabbalat Shabbat activities to festivals and much more. Hundreds of thousands of Secular Israelis have deepened their connection to Jewish tradition with thanks to Tzohar. Importantly, Adam will share his and Tzohar's hopes and aims for the future.

A MESSAGE FROM RABBI GABI

I am absolutely thrilled to share some wonderful news with you – the newest member of our family, Lilly-Sara Leeba Kaltmann, has made her grand entrance into the world and is home now with Mushka! The joy is immeasurable, and our home is buzzing with excitement as we welcome her with open arms.

The boys and Yahli are over the moon with happiness, and I'm happy to report that Mushka is doing well. As we embrace this new chapter filled with cuddles and tender moments, our hearts are full of gratitude.

Adding to the excitement, today is Tu B'Shvat, the new year for trees. The timing couldn't be more perfect, symbolizing growth, renewal, and the blossoming of new beginnings.

This holiday is one of four Rosh Hashanahs (Jewish New Years) that are mentioned in the Torah and symbolizes the new year for all trees and plants.

To celebrate this particular new year, people eat fruits, especially fruits that are native to the land of Israel like pomegranates, figs, grapes and dates. In recent years, the festival has taken on a new urgency as we become more aware of the challenges our world is facing with extreme heat, fires, and deforestation affecting the natural world around us.

Trees and plants in Judaism play an important and integral role. The Torah proscribes that tithes from trees must be set aside and donated to the Priests and Levites. In addition, when a new fruit tree is planted, there is a minimum waiting period of 3 years before one can enjoy the fruits that the tree has produced.

These laws are to help remind us that nature and the produce that is provided for human consumption and enjoyment are a labour of love, and represent a blessing. Instead of just expecting that we can all enjoy the fruits immediately, the waiting period increases the appreciation and excitement for the natural produce and trees in our lives.

Similarly, in the Torah agricultural produce is used to help the poor and disadvantaged. When owners of fields and orchards undertake their harvest, the Torah instructs them to leave parts of the corners of their fields for poor people to come and eat-free of charge. Field owners are also instructed to leave any late flowering fruit or vines behind for the poor to enjoy.

The power of Tu B'Shvat is that it keeps us consistently in touch with nature, the natural world, and the fruit we enjoy.

Living in a bountiful country like Australia where access to high quality produce is a given, and our shelves and supermarkets are (generally) fully stocked with often little insight into how these fruit made it from the field to the shop can make us forget that natural produce is a big blessing.

Tu B'Shvat helps us to consider the long path and blessings that were involved in the planting, harvesting, and production of these fruit and agricultural products.

As we enter into a restful Shabbat, I would like each of us to consider and perhaps pay attention to the beautiful natural world around us. We are more aware than ever that the natural world is a fragile ecosystem that needs care, love, and attention to maintain itself. We can take responsibility by doing our little part and using the themes of Tu B'Shvat to contribute to making the world around us a little more beautiful.

I look forward to seeing each of you at Shule this week where my drasha will focus on this week's Parsha, Beshalach and the splitting of the sea and the exodus from Egypt!

Happy Australia Day, enjoy the long weekend and I hope to have a L'chaim with you in Shule this Friday night to celebrate if you are around.

Shabbat Shalom

Rabbi Gabi
